

T2 Project Update

The focus of this training project is on creating educational materials on pressure ulcer prevention and cardiovascular health with the goal of increasing awareness of healthcare professionals, specifically medical students and residents about common medical complications in the spinal cord injury population. Several systematic reviews will be completed under this project.

The pressure ulcer educational material is based on evidence-based content and includes both online didactics as well as case-based, “virtual patient,” interactive materials. The initial version was tested with medical students earlier this year, and additional testing will occur this spring and summer.

The educational material for cardiovascular health is currently in the planning stage.

If you are interested in using the educational material, please contact Manon Schladen at Manon.schladen@medstar.net or info@sci-health.org
